The Cross

O the depths of the riches of wisdom and of the knowledge of God.

Today, my heart stands in love and awe before these great words of Saint Paul. The thought comes to me not to wonder that I love you, but to marvel that you love me.

O Jesus, Lord and Master, I fall at your feet and adore you with all the love and the power of my soul. I am yours to do with as you please.

I have made my choice. I want to be wherever you are. I want to follow you to the end. Yes, I know your end was Calvary; your way was the Way of the Cross.

Catherine de Hueck Doherty was born in Russia and was the foundress of Madonna House in Combermere, Canada.

Sunday Reflection
God forbid, Lord!

What a stunning reversal! You don't confess someone as "the Son of the Living God" and then turn around and scold them! What could have triggered such a strong reaction from Peter? The news that Jesus was going to "suffer greatly . . . and be killed" by Jerusalem's religious leaders.

Of course, Peter had the purest of intentions when he rebuked Jesus; he could not bear the thought of his beloved Master and Friend suffering such a horrible fate.

But there may also have been a deeper motive in Peter's actions. Perhaps he was eager to preserve Jesus' image as an untouchable miracle worker so that he could be safe too.

Peter had been with Jesus long enough to see that being a disciple meant risking people's scorn and misunderstanding. It meant pouring out his life to God for the sake of the people around him.

But Jesus would have none of it. So he told Peter that anyone who wanted to become like him had to take up his cross and follow in his footsteps.

It's tempting to keep Jesus at arm's length so that he can't get too close and ask too much of us. Jesus made it very clear: there is a cost to discipleship. It's not always easy to follow the Lord and obey his commandments.

So take up your cross today. Try your best to follow in Jesus' path of self-giving love.

"Lord, I don't want to keep you at a distance. Teach me how to give of myself as you did."
